

Son of Southern Chef Cook with Soul

Growing up in a family of renowned Southern chefs, Edouardo Jordan learned the art of cooking from the masters. His father, John Jordan, was the executive chef at Commander's Palace in New Orleans, and his mother, Paula Jordan, was a well-respected chef in her own right. Edouardo spent his childhood immersed in the vibrant culture of Southern cuisine, and he developed a deep love for the food and traditions of his heritage.
